NWOETC Fall Notes

Show season is upon us and most people I have talked to recently are busy prepping their show teams for upcoming shows. This should be a banner show season for our club as we already had 268 young bird entries at Louisville and about that same number predicted for the upcoming District 3 show in Shawnee and the Detroit National. With the Pageant drawing in 375 there are some really big shows on the schedule that are spread all over the country so get ready for some wild rodeos. All in all, a very good year for the breed and that forward momentum should continue into the show season for next year.

Several NWOETC point shows are already in the books. Starting off the year was the Western YB Show in Irvine on Sept 16th, where Brian McCormick took Champion and Res. Champion honors. On Oct. 13th George Garcia had Champion and David Garcia had Res. Champion at the District 4 Show in Albuquerque.

Bill Henderson took Champion honors at the Louisville YB Show on Oct. 27th and Jay Turner had Reserve. The judge for the Louisville was Bob Shoemaker, replacing Bob Christman who unfortunately experienced a death in the family the weekend before the show. Our condolences go out to Bob Christman and our thanks go to Bob Shoemaker for stepping in on short notice.

Also added to the schedule this year was an Eastern Regional show held in Fort Payne, AL on Nov. 10th. Bill Henderson had Champion and Reserve Champion of that show to continue his incredible hot streak. The regional shows will be rotating shows that can be added to the schedule by the board of directors each year.

District 5 had their show on Nov. 10th in Rogue River, OR and Perry Garwood had champion, Bob Christman sent up some birds and took Reserve Champion. Christman already had the nickname "Mr. November" and added to that reputation when his White Self OC took champion over 375 other entries at the Pageant of Pigeons/District 6 show the following weekend. Terry Bishop took Reserve Champ with a Red Bald OC. Results for most of these shows are included in this bulletin.

A couple weeks ago I received the Sept/Oct issue of Purebred Pigeon which was our "West special". Wow, what an impressive promotion for the breed. There were several good articles in there and Brian McCormick's collection of photos on the inside spread was simply awesome. Thanks to all who contributed articles and ads to make that a memorable issue and one that will surely become a collector's item for the breed. Special thanks to Bill Henderson who purchased and donated the front cover as promotion for the NWOETC and to Allen Turcotte for doing the cover artwork.

The membership approved the establishment of an NWOETC Master Judge award from the ballots in the last bulletin. The award will be based on specific criteria from judging district and National shows. Full information on this will be listed on our club website: www.nwoetc.com or call me and I will mail you a copy.

Also approved on a recent ballot to the membership was increasing the adult dues from $15 to $20. The dues increase will take effect with the 2008 season and the updated prices are shown on the membership application/renewal in this bulletin.

Band prices are the same for 2008 and the 8,000 total number of bands is the same as 2007. About 2,500 of them are already sold and we did sell out in early April this year so the same thing will probably happen again in 2008.

Don't get shut out, order your bands early, like right now!!! Bands ordered by mid-December will start shipping on Dec. 26th

Membership dues are required at the time you purchase the bands so renew that soon as well. And please note it can take 2-3 weeks for delivery of your band orders so please order them ahead of the time you need to start banding your birds.

As many of you know, Chuck Zeller, one of our charter members suffered a heart attack recently. Chuck is involved with the club in so many ways that he can be thought of as one of the main pistons in the engine that drives the club. We all know that it takes a lot more than a little heart trouble to take down Chuck, but a nurse who botched a few medical procedures can certainly do a number on him. I saw him at the SCWOETC Oct. YB Show and on the final day of the Pageant and he's looking pretty darn good. We're also expecting to see him at the National in Detroit if all goes well. We hope Chuck continues to get back to full speed, but Chuck please take it a little easy for a while – we need you around for a long time to come.

This is an election year so the nominations for 2008-2009 officers are finalized and the nominees who accepted their nominations are listed on the ballot in this bulletin. Please get your ballots in by Dec. 19th. The new slate of officers will be installed at our annual club meeting held at the Detroit National.

I am proud to announce that Bob Christman has qualified for the NPA Master Breeder award which will be handed out at the Detroit National. He now joins Jim Krebaum Sr. and Jr. and Bruce Rodegerdts as the only West of England breeders to win that honor.

That's it for now. Shine 'em up and show 'em!

- Matt Matuska, Sec./Treas.

Compatible Colors by Bob Christman

This posting is intended as a guide to color breeding for many of our newer breeders. Over the last several months I have seen many pictures of youngsters that were the result of some rather unusual color crosses. Color is important in the West. Without good color you will not win in the show pen. Many colors are not compatible with each other and to haphazardly breed them together is going to be detrimental to maintaining good color. When having extra birds of different colors sitting in the loft it is tempting to breed them. But it is better to wait to obtain a mate that is compatible with the color you want to raise then to just mate two birds together that are not compatible in color just because they are available. When mating these incompatible colors together the resulting offspring usually will not meet the standard for color and are not usually useful for advancing your stud for the color you want to breed.

Trying to breed that one with excellent color is a game of playing the odds. When breeding like to like or to a compatible color you are increasing the odds of raising a bird with good color. When breeding to unrelated colors or incompatible colors the lower the odds that you will raise that good one with good color.

Good color was bred well before we knew anything about color inheritance. With few exceptions, color breeding basically consists of breeding the best to the best of any particular color to each other. In general you should be breeding like to like or to closely related colors. Most successful colors have been the result of many years of selective breeding, weeding out the undesired color modifiers and selecting for the desired modifiers that result in the ideal expression of that specific color. This is an ongoing process. Regardless of how well established a particular color family is this process needs to continue or otherwise the color will eventually regress.

The ideal color, whether an almond, cream bar, blue check, red mottle, black self, or whatever, is the result of a specific combination of genes that is unique to each color. The genetic combinations for some of these colors are very similar to each other while other combinations are very different from each other. A good colored khaki bar can be mated to a good colored silver bar, for instance, and one would generally expect to have good colored silver bar and khaki bar offspring because both of these colors are the result of combination of genes that are very similar to each other. On the other hand if you were to mate a good colored black to a good colored blue bar, for example, the result will mostly be black offspring that lack in color compared to the original parent. The reason is that the combinations of genes that make up a good black are very different than the combination of genes that make up a good colored blue bar. By crossing the black to the blue bar new combinations of genes are being created that are detrimental to either maintaining good colored blacks or good colored blue bars.

Following are some general guidelines for breeding colors. Sometimes some unconventional crosses can result in good colored birds but that is usually an exception and not what would generally be the norm. Even those exceptions can often have an overall detrimental effect on the gene pool for that color family you are trying to build or maintain. To be successful in breeding a specific color family, whatever color, is a long term sustained effort and the decision to cross to another color needs to be carefully evaluated in the terms of whether it is going to improve the color you are working on before making that cross.

BARRED, OPEN CHECK, AND T-PATTERNS

Khaki bars, brown bars, silver bars and blue bars are very compatible colors and can be mated in any combination. Other potential successful matings would be to khaki, brown silver and blue open checks or T-patterns.

Cream bars and red bars are compatible. They could also be successfully bred to yellow and red open checks and T-patterns.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate cream or red bars, checks, or T-patterns to the khaki, brown, silver and blue bars, checks or T-patterns.

Generally it is also detrimental to breed bars, checks or T-patterns to velvets, selfs, mottles, almonds, andalusians (andalusian to blue bar may be a possible exception), kites, gray laces, khaki laces, peach laces or tortoiseshells.

VELVETS

Khaki velvets, brown velvets, silver (dun) velvets and blue bars are very compatible colors and can be mated in any combination.

Yellow, gold and red velvets are compatible in any combination (yellow and red baldheads are examples of yellow and red velvet).

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate yellow, gold or red velvets to the khaki, brown, silver (dun) or blue velvets.

Generally it is also detrimental to breed velvets to bars, checks, T-patterns, selfs, mottles, almonds, andalusians, kites, gray laces, khaki laces, peach laces or tortoiseshells.

SELFS & MOTTLES

Khaki, brown, dun and black selfs and mottles are very compatible colors and can be mated in any combination. When breeding khaki, brown, dun and black mottles the preferred mating would be self to mottle.

Yellow, gold, and red selfs and mottles are very compatible colors and can be mated in any combination. When breeding yellow, gold, and red mottles the preferred mating would be mottle to mottle.

White selfs the preferred mating is white self to white self. Potential out cross is white to cream bar or red bar baldheads. (Numbers will vary from mating to mating but you could expect between 50 to 80 per cent whites and between 20 to 50 per cent mismarks.)

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate khaki, brown, dun or black selfs and mottles to yellow, gold or red selfs or mottles.

Generally it is also detrimental to color to mate selfs or mottles to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, almonds, andalusians (with the exception of black self or mottle to andalusian), kites, gray laces, khaki laces, peach laces, dominant opal or tortoiseshells.

ALMONDS

Kites and agates are compatible with almonds. Sulfur or gold (pale) kites and yellow or gold agates can be useable in the short term but detrimental in the long term because eventually dilute and pale almonds will be produced lowering the chances of raising the proper colored almond even lower. Bronze tortoiseshells can also be a compatible for breeding almonds.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate almonds to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs, mottles, andalusians, gray laces, khaki laces, peach laces, or dominant opals.

ANDALUSIANS

Black selfs or mottles bred to andalusian is the usual mating for andalusians. Andalusians to andalusian can also produce good colored andalusians. It may be possible to produce good colored andalusians from andalusian to blue bar or even gray lace matings.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate andalusians to bars (except blue), checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs (except black), mottles (except black), almonds, kites, khaki laces, peach laces, dominant opals or tortoiseshells.

KITES

Almond and tortoise shell are compatible matings with kites.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate kites to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs, mottles, andalusians, gray laces, khaki laces, peach laces or dominant opals.

GRAY LACES

Gray lace to gray lace or to khaki laces is the preferred mating. Gray laces can be successfully out crossed to black selfs, brown selfs or andalusians.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate gray laces to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs (except black), mottles, almonds, kites, peach laces, dominant opals or tortoiseshells.

KHAKI LACES

Khaki lace to khaki lace is the preferred mating. Khaki laces can be successfully out crossed to gray laces, black selfs, or brown selfs.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate khaki laces to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs (except black), mottles, almonds, andalusians, kites, peach laces, dominant opals or tortoiseshells.

PEACH LACES

Peach lace to peach lace is the preferred mating.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate peach laces to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs, mottles, almonds, andalusians, kites, gray laces, khaki laces, dominant opals or tortoiseshells.

TORTOISESHELLS

Tortoiseshell to tortoiseshell or tortoiseshell to kite is the preferred mating. Almond to tortoise shell or agate to tortoiseshell can be a successful mating.

Generally it is detrimental to color to mate tortoiseshells to bars, checks, T-patterns, velvets, selfs, mottles, andalusians, gray laces, khaki laces, peach laces or dominant opals.
